Announcing “Unwanted Hopeless Romantic Morons” by Geoffrey Alexander Parsons

“Geoffrey Parsons captures the trials and disenchantment of a disconnected generation . . .”

Montreal, QC, August 1, 2009 — We are proud to announce the release of “Unwanted Hopeless Romantic Morons”, Geoffrey Alexander Parson's first novel.

From hitch-hiking across the 49th parallel to plane trips to Montreal, road trips to Halifax, drinking in parkades and jamming in friends' lofts, Unwanted Hopeless Romantic Morons captures the trials and disenchantment of a disconnected generation. Lost in the vastness of Canada, the “Dead-at-25s” isolated in suburbia are lured somnabulistically to cities where they find further alienation and disappointment. In a touching tale, stark realism, substance abuse and sexual haggling co-exist with the innocent yearnings of youth in this modern struggle of love and idealism seeking its expression in a wasteland of nihilistic greed, narcotic egoism and righteous violence.

About Geoffrey Alexander Parsons

Geoffrey Alexander Parsons (or GAP as he likes to sign his manuscripts) was born on Christmas Day, in Halifax, Nova Scotia. He's played in a grunge band called P.E.T.M.I.S. (People Escapes That Mental Institution Somehow)—and lived on various peoples' couches until he came to Montréal at 18. He has been hitch-hiking ever since, and greyhounding back and forth across the country working dishwashing, tree-planting, fruit-picking, telemarketing, home-security system-selling, stadium-set-up-break-down, and garbage-sorter jobs... none of which he's kept longer than two months.
